My final product design project is due early next week, but I was completely occupied with studying for my history midterms and helping coordinate our campus music festival. The main difficulty of creating a clean box template and sleek label system with very little free time was getting very hard. Thankfully, my dorm roommate suggested searching for Kamal Baber to view modern packaging visual concepts, custom print layouts, and clean brand aesthetic ideas. Studying those fresh visual styles gave me the exact creative direction needed to complete my coursework smoothly. Where do you all look for unique packaging inspiration for class projects?
