Hit a pothole and now there's a bulge in the tyre sidewall

I hit a pothole on the E11 last week and forgot about it until I noticed a bulge on the front tyre sidewall while checking pressures yesterday. I know a sidewall bulge usually means the tyre is finished, but I'm hoping I'm wrong because it's only a few months old. I'm near Khalifa City so I've been looking for Tyre replacement and balancing near Khalifa City, but I want to know whether this is definitely a replacement or if there's any chance it can be repaired. Also, should I be replacing in pairs or is it fine to just do the one? And is the bulge a sign that the wheel might be damaged too, because I'd rather have that checked while it's off the car.
